Killer picks up spent shell, walks away calmly

By Nina Garcia

A LONE GUNMAN shot and killed a radio news anchor with a single bullet fired to the back of the head. He then picked up the spent shell and walked away calmly, police said.

Marissa "Joni" Flores, 45, of radio station DMM's Nanghasa 103.1, was killed a few meters away from her home on Siliman Street in Baguio, Benguet, in northern Luzon. She was about to head to a nearby store for her way to work yesterday morning.

Sgt. Ben Genillo, Northern Police District public information chief, said the bullet entered Flores's back and exited through her eye.

The gunman was a professional hit man who left no important clues at the crime scene. Even the empty clip of an automatic pistol was picked up by the police, Genillo said.

The suspect also took Flores's mobile phone and heading to make a bank for a robbery, the police said.

Flores was pronounced dead on arrival at National General Hospital.

She was the fourth journalist to be killed under the Aquino administration and the 14th since the start of the current Ferdinand Marcos in 1965, said the National Union of Journalists of the Philippines.

Benigno Aquino, the nation's secretary general, said the attack on Flores was unusual, pointing out that the man who shot her was not a known assassin.

PH bans Japan milk chocolates; global embargo widens

By Kristine L. Alon

KURITA of Animal Industry (KARI) Banerji (Bani) Memon yesterday said he had issued "red color" warning Japanese chocolate with products shipped to the Philippines after the March 22 earthquake, which caused damaged food imports from quake-hit Japan. Russia, Australia, Canada and Singapore were the first to join the list of countries which had banned Japanese food imports as a retaliation against Japan's nuclear power plant accident, which caused the Fukushima Daiichi Nuclear Power Station, making global history.

A banned color "is being

BIR sues 3 former Philcomsat executives

By Mike Dizon

THE BUREAU of Internal Revenue (BIR) yesterday filed tax evasion charges against three former officials of Philcomsat Holdings Corp. (PHC), which accused them of a 2006 lawsuit.

The charges were filed in the Department of Justice against former PHC chief and director General Romeo Barrios, and former director Philip Borden and Luis Llaneta Jr.

Among the three respondents, it was Borden who appeared to have allegedly committed the most serious crime.

BIR Deputy Commissioner Jacobo Salas said in a press conference that the investigation of the three former PHC officials was based on the results of an inquiry in 2006, documents provided by informants and corporate records "showing that they committed tax evasion."

Ligot arrested for contempt

But Senate suspends arrest, detention of wife

With 53% more savings, you can spend more on other essentials.

By TJ Bugarin

PCOIL snubbing the inquiry into military corruption without justifiable reason, former military budget officer Jacinto Ligot and his wife Erlinda have been cited for contempt by the Senate.

The former general was immediately arrested last night in a military officer's housing village in Tagaytay and is now in Senate custody.

However, the arrest and detention order for this Ligot has been suspended for "a substantial reason" because of his health, said Sen. Teodoro Triunfo III, chair of the Senate Blue Ribbon committee.

Senate sergeant at arms Jose Balagtas said Ligot did not meet arrest. He was brought at 9 p.m. to the Senate detention room, where he was checked by doctors.

He will be allowed visit by immediate family members and his lawyers during at least two days, Balagtas said.

After ensuring the required items, the committee yesterday ordered the Senate sergeant at arms to enforce the contempt order on Ligot and arrest and detain him "until he complies with his will appear and give testimony."

Through their lawyers, the Ligots had earlier informed the committee that they could not attend the hearing for health reasons. But a Senate doctor stated them as bogus and found them to be healthy enough to appear at the hearing.

After the hearing finished past noon, Congress started for signing the contempt order for the Ligots.

By 3 p.m., Congress and Senator Ralph Recto, Congress President E. Pineda Daguin, Sen. Francisco D. Irujo, Sen. Delfino S. Zaldy, Sen. Antonio Trillanes IV and Sen. Miguel Zubelli had signed the order. Senate President Juan Ponce Enrile was in Congress. Congress started signing the contempt order.

In the order, Congress said that Ligot has no effect, no effect, no effect and no effect on the inquiry by stopping the hearing due to his health that ended up to be false.

Earlier the Cabinet, Panel and Senate Law Office wrote to the committee to say that Erlinda was suffering from severe health issues and was hospitalized while Ligot was in custody with the law, and could therefore not attend the hearing.

Taiwan's de facto ambassador to the Philippines says that a month after he was recalled by his government following a diplomatic row over the deployment of 14 Taiwanese to China.

Donald Lee, the Taipei Economic and Cultural Office (TECO) representative, flew to Manila Tuesday early morning to meet with his counterparts in the Philippines to discuss the situation between the two governments concerning the incident.

Lee, who was sent to the airport by Chinese Filipino philanthropist James Uy and his daughter, Ching, said he was happy to be back in the country but declined to give any other statement.

Last December, Philippine immigration authorities arrested 14 Taiwanese and 14 Chinese tourists suspected of participating in an alleged scam to smuggle Chinese citizens out of the country of Taiwan.

Those arrested were all deported to China on Feb. 3, despite Taipei's protestations that the 14 Taiwanese should be sent back to Taiwan to face justice there and a habeas corpus order from the Court of Appeals.

Noynoy hosts dinner for impeachment vote

By Christine G. Amador

PREVIEW Aquino was scheduled to give a dinner last night, to "reunite" the "Youngpinos" House members who voted for the impeachment of Ferdinand Marcos last year.

Communications Secretary Ricky Carandang confirmed the date but said he did not know where the dinner was going to be.

"The President wanted to reunite those who took courageous actions in the face of pressure for them to do otherwise," Carandang said.

A total of 112 congressmen voted to impeach Duterte early this month, paving the way for an impeachment trial in the Senate May, when Congress convenes again.

On Wednesday, Mr. Aquino told the media in Cagayan de Oro City that he understood the need to bring the two "not happy" with his performance and that of his officials.

The President sought the people's support to his bid to move forward.

Presidential spokesperson Edwin Lacerda yesterday said Mr. Aquino was not worried about how the voting would go in the Senate, where his liberal Party has only four members.

"Obviously, the President believes in the outcome of the Senate. That's not in doubt," Lacerda told reporters.

"The President has every confidence that the impeachment is a strong complaint, that it has a strong legal foundation for Congress to act on," he said.

Lacerda said Duterte has been a stumbling block to his reform efforts.

Church calls for nationwide anti-RH rally today

By Philip C. Salasa

TO MARK that it's still the dawn of anti-life in its infancy, the Catholic Church will hold today a massive prayer rally against the reproductive health (RH) bill pending in Congress.

Masses are advised to avoid the Luzon area in Manila from 11 p.m. to midnight. Manila Archbishop Cardinal Sison will be at the forefront of the rally—dubbed "Ultimate United Under God for Life"—that will see Catholic dioceses from Luzon to Mindanao shaping their own demonstrations.

"The prayer rally is for all those who value life, family and life values. Your presence will deliver the message that our country will never allow the reproductive RH bill to be passed," Sison said.

The RH bill pending in the House of Representatives and the Senate would mandate the government to provide artificial birth control means to citizens who demand it. They should be reproductive health education beginning in the primary grades.

The Catholic Church in the country is staunchly opposed to this.

'Walk for Life'

Among those expected to attend the rally in the Luzon area are Senate President Juan Ponce Enrile and 11 Catholic leaders from Manila, including Archbishop Sison, Manila Archbishop Cardinal Sison, and 11 Catholic leaders from San Agustin Church in Intramuros in Manila.

The archbishops of Manila and Manila province are mobilizing for a massive nationwide prayer rally and vigil from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. in protest here," said Msgr. Clemente Llaneta.

"The Church is bringing our governments here that it and other religious are against all laws that would hurt any life. In addition, aside from the dioceses nationwide, Catholic organizations, communities like the 11 Quakos and Quakos for Christ, people groups, churches, students, youth, and the urban poor will join the rally.

The program will start with the recitation of the rosary at 4 p.m. to be followed by the stations of the cross and other activities before a Mass at 7 p.m.

'Prodigal son' confesses but remains unrepentant

By Philip C. Salasa

MANILA

With his head bowed, popular local news anchor Carlo Galban arrived at the Manila Cathedral at 11:30 a.m. yesterday to go to his knees.

With about 100 people in the cathedral, Galban began to read a statement with his well-publicized protest inside the cathedral in September last year.

It didn't help that Galban was caught on a security camera waving down at his RH reproductive health bill supports outside the CHRF building close to Intramuros on Friday. It seemed to be seen if the Church would forgive him for that sin. A Church source said the decision would not be with Manila Archbishop Cardinal Sison.

It was his first confession in 11 years.

Confession

Galban said he confessed his sin to Fr. Julio Francisco so that he would have "cleansed" and "reset" after his business process, when he held up a sign with the same message on it, but Church officials to change how such offending religious feelings. Before the Manila Metropolitan Trial Court, Galban was the spouse of a local right-wing activist in the revolutionary Jose Rizal novel, "The Rizal Novel."

But Galban insisted he would continue to fight the Church's opposition to the RH bill pending in Congress—and that he "probably" would not do so more and RH bill passes.

For him, however, the fight should be on Congress and not on himself, Galban said.

"The purpose was for the Church and to move on. I don't have a very, very interesting opinion about this being lost and a time the people in step to, coming down to earth to that is coming on, putting our problems up on the world," Galban later told reporters.

'Catholic Catholic'

"I feel I think that the message of our confession and for us to find clarity with our apostles, we can find the time to move on and to find positions in the world in our own manner within our world," he said.

But Galban denied the conflict with Sison, Galban, a self-described "Catholic Catholic," declined to say how many the Church and that Mary he had money for his presence.

"I feel we're going to a very good moment right now (I had) a very understanding priest... but whatever happened, says Sison, as I said even my love for Mary I feel proud. I'll leave it up to you to give him clarity," Galban said.

Last confession

"My last confession was when I got married in 2000. So that was 11 years, 11 years of not confessing," he said.

Fr. Mariano Castro, executive secretary of the Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines (CBCP) Episcopal Commission on Family and Life, said Galban could be considered a "prodigal son" for his apology to the Church.

"In spiritual, there is constant forgiveness, constant understanding, that when it comes to civil law, that's different," Castro said.

"In any case, in a personal or spiritual level, the Church's understanding is always there but in a civil manner, it's the law. We can't remove that," he added.

Galban, who said he apologized for the "sinners" of his protest but not for its "message" and the Church were supposed to have reached a settlement in his court case. He insisted he repeatedly submitted a letter of apology as part of the settlement.

Refuting

Before going to confession, Galban was refuting in his plea to the left of the media when he heard Mass. He did not take Holy Communion.

When it was over, Galban said, production and they went to a safe room where the priest heard his confession.

"It was my first time (to go to the cathedral) since the Sept. 30 protest. It was my first time to actually see the front again where I used to be. In the front, and there where the bishops are seated," Galban said.

"It is like, in a weird way, I was waiting for this," he said.

He said a temporary arrangement was made for the building project on Monday by a group group may have organized the dispute.

"We are still not sure about the details. By tomorrow, we may have a detailed report on this," General said.

Sarmiento worked for DGB and DAB as a public service contact. She was behind the

IN THE KNOW

ON JAN. 24, radio commentator Garry Ortega was shot dead by a lone gunman while he was shopping in a local market area in Puerto Princesa City after his breakfast. He suffered bullet wounds in the head and body.

Ortega, author of the book My Motherland (2008) local affiliate death toll shot "murdered," was the 11th journalist killed since 1986, and the third journalist to be murdered since the Aquino administration, the National Union of Journalists of the Philippines said.

On July 3, 2009, Jose Lapina, former mayor and reporter for Star News Malabon was gunned down in his home in Malabon province.

A week later, Miguel Lirio, a reporter of radio-57.5 FM in Malabon, Cavite, was shot and wounded by motorcycle-riding men in an ambush, killed and on July 31, after weeks of fighting the his life in a hospital in Ilog City.

In June 2008, the Manila Office administration pledged to help them become President Aquino's main media allies.

The Philippines placed third in the 2009 impunity index by the Translative in Drugs, Journalism, which highlights countries where journalists are killed regularly and governments fail to solve the crimes.

The killing of 30 journalists in 2009, among 50 people murdered in 2009, was the highest since the 1980s.

The killings were the deadliest single day attack against journalists in the world on journalists.

"The impunity remained, even if the Philippines has made some progress in solving impunity in two journalist murders," the union said.

It, however, said that "back from the Magistrate's murder, the country's impunity record showed some signs of improvement with the release of the 2009 impunity index by the Translative in Malabon."

The journalist killed in Malabon was among the over 100 Filipinos released to the journalists in Washington, killed by the government's anti-terrorism efforts.

Chinese diplomats: Executions should not strain PH-Sino ties

By Herman Sandoval

MANILA: Ambassador Luis Sandoval said he understands from the Philippines regarding the March 20 execution of the three "criminals."

"It is something that has to happen in accordance with Chinese law, but we hope to have the understanding of the Philippine public and also the Philippine government," Sandoval said in an interview with reporters in Beijing.

"And I mean to emphasize that the Chinese people have a very friendly approach toward our Philippine friends. The case itself is very unfortunate, which has to happen in accordance with the law, but it is not a factor affecting our bilateral relations, which is going to be in the interest of our two countries," he said.

He said the Chinese government would "do everything that (it) can" to allow the criminals and their families to spend time together before the execution.

"We are sure that everything will be resolved out in the end," he said. "We are very keen to develop the friendship and good relations between our two countries."

Continuing dialogue

Sandoval said the Chinese government had tried to let the Philippines' requests in connection with the case. He said he had not yet received any communication from the Vice President in connection with the March 20 execution.

"I haven't gotten the letter yet, but I have that the Vice President himself, and the Philippine government have been working very hard to convey the message and concern of the Philippine side about the verdict of the three criminals also reflected in China," Sandoval said.

"We needed very hard on this, as within the limit of the Chinese law, we tried our best to accommodate, but you know the law has been set for the (execution of the) Philippines," he said.

He indicated that a telephone agreement between the two countries.

"I think there have been some initiatives from the Philippine side, but this is a complicated issue because we have... differences in our legal system," he said.

"We are keen to continue the dialogue and also our effort in finding the possibilities of having a treaty based on mutual benefit. While we are very open to such an initiative, we continue to have consultations with the Philippine government," he said.

Friendly relations

Sandoval said, deeply and of the political system and governance of the Chinese government, and his government hoped that the ongoing experience would not strain diplomatic relations.

"China has always been committed to developing friendly relations with the Philippines. The position remains and will always be unchanged," he said.

Sandoval said he returned to Manila and Villanueva and Gato in Manila. DPA spokesman J. Eduardo Malaya announced on Wednesday.

Kidnapped

Malaya spokesman said last week members of the three victims would not be allowed to attend the execution.

Villanueva, Gato, and Sarmiento were originally asked to meet on March 20, but on March 21, he was a visit to Beijing and approach for clearance by a high-level Philippine delegation.

He said the Philippine delegation led by Vice President Sandoval and Chinese Justice Minister Sandoval is seeking understanding.

Sandoval said he had a letter of approval in Chinese authorities regarding the scheduled case.

The Vice President believes that while the execution has not yet been carried out, there is still hope. He wants to release all possible means," Sandoval said at a meeting in Manila.

His daughter Sarmiento's case, Sandoval expressed the Philippine government's regime of the three countries' law.

"Generally, we would prefer a more positive outcome, but we are realistic about the situation. We are aware that the government has been very hard on the prosecution of these crimes," Sandoval said.

Sandoval said he had had a request with Chinese authorities to be allowed to return his daughter's body. "In the event that the execution proceeds through."

"I had that in many cases they execute the bodies of those executed. I hope they will allow us to have the body home with us," he said.

How it will be done

China Article 212 of the criminal procedure law of China, a leading official said, the execution of the three Filipinos would not be held in public.

The justice minister said that the police officers directing the execution shall verify the identity of the executed, and then ask him/her if he/she has any last words or wishes for family members, and the woman who asked not to be executed because of the delivery of the subject mother.

The judicial officer will then "ask the criminal the execution of the death sentence," the source said.

Once the execution is done, the Chinese must that issued the death sentence shall verify the family members.

The text of the Chinese law says that the execution of the criminal—execution or capital.

"It is in the letter, the execution of the criminal's remains may be made after the carrying out of the execution," the source said.

The Hyundai Blue Drive

Forging ahead in Green Technology towards Leadership

Hyundai Blue is the New Green Movement

Blue Drive is Hyundai Motor Company's innovative green agenda which will bring us a market range of sustainable vehicles to deliver sustainable value to its stakeholders worldwide and provide Hyundai as a world-leader leader in the automotive industry.

"We are pursuing the prolonged 'Blue Drive' initiative, which focuses on improving fuel efficiency and the development of alternative fuel vehicles with safety, superior environmental characteristics," stated Mr. Myung-Joon Cho, Chairman and CEO of Hyundai Motor Company. "We are now making an unprecedented effort in the development of alternative fuel vehicles as a technology solution for future challenges facing society," he added to reinforce Hyundai's green commitment to drastically reducing carbon emissions and fuel consumption through fossil-fuel-independent energy.

Hyundai, Korea-based engine and efficient motorisation have greatly increased engine efficiency to deliver a 20% to 30% lower CO₂ emissions than other industry benchmarks. This is achieved through R&D investment, advanced internal combustion engine design, in-line, which can rapidly deliver high mileage of energy while complying with strict environmental standards.

To reduce energy loss, improvements in transmissions have been employed through Hyundai's "8-speed dual-clutch" design language to increase gear ratios while offering the benefit of energy loss, ensuring fuel economy, and a 6-speed manual gearbox, which is a 6-speed manual gearbox, which is a 6-speed manual gearbox, which is a 6-speed manual gearbox.

Alternative Fuel Capabilities

The increasing petroleum costs and the growing commitment for eco-green motoring have led Hyundai to develop vehicles that run on various fuels – flexible fuel alternatives that help reduce dependence on fossil fuels. Hyundai's commitment to energy loss, ensuring fuel economy, and a 6-speed manual gearbox, which is a 6-speed manual gearbox, which is a 6-speed manual gearbox.

Achieving Cutting Edge Fuel Efficiency

Hyundai's new generation 1.6L TDI diesel engine technology is one of its latest. Hyundai 1.6L TDI engine technology has been developed to achieve the highest efficiency of 100% power output and 100% torque output. The engine is a 1.6L TDI engine, which is a 1.6L TDI engine, which is a 1.6L TDI engine.

Blue Engines on the Road

Adding 1.6L Hyundai Blue Drive range of vehicles offers a 6.5% to 8.5% more Hyundai Power and 10% more torque than the 1.6L TDI engine, not only 10% of the 1.6L TDI engine's power, but also of the 1.6L TDI engine's torque, not only 10% of the 1.6L TDI engine's power, but also of the 1.6L TDI engine's torque.

In India, Hyundai's advancements in compressed natural gas (CNG) technology have gained traction with a CNG station network established in the country. Hyundai's commitment to energy loss, ensuring fuel economy, and a 6-speed manual gearbox, which is a 6-speed manual gearbox, which is a 6-speed manual gearbox.

In the Philippines, Hyundai made official its compliance with the Philippine government's implementation of their own (as of 2010) emission standards. blue drive blue technology for a green tomorrow

Across the spectrum of green engineering, Hyundai's Blue Drive™ technology leads with the most distinctive line.

Blue Drive technology and Hyundai's commitment to 'green' transportation leading towards sustainable mobility. Today, that vision, Hyundai's eco-responsibility will go beyond to all cars and to provide the most eco-friendly and sustainable to all on alternative fuel, and we will be the most eco-friendly car line.

With the most range of eco-green vehicles in the world now in the future, Hyundai ensures that there will be nothing but the blue drive.

Open pit mining ban enforced soon

By Riza T. Delacruz

THE GOVERNMENT OF South Cotabato is bent on enforcing a ban on open pit mining in the province, which Malabon is trying to block through violent threats to the local government.

The province hosts a $5.5-billion copper-gold project said to be one of the biggest in the world.

Gov. Arthur Bayag said in a press interview that he had signed the implementing rules and regulations (IRR) of an environmental law-specific mining, a moratorium which requires the clearing of entire hills to open access to mineral deposits.

The IRR would be published in a national newspaper after which the provincial government would enforce the law.

"The environmentalists are not just about the open pit mining law, it also deals with protected and other activities which may affect the environment," the governor said.

To add knowledge that the provincial government is taking could have an adverse effect on mining investments in South Cotabato.

The state project is a $5.5-billion copper-gold mine which could potentially contribute 1 percent of the country's gross domestic product and local economic growth.

The open pit ban could also disrupt other mining activity operations, as well as real estate, which conglomerates like Meralco are involved in.

The reality is that while this initiative was passed by the province legislature and signed by the governor, it is in the administration which has to implement it," said Bayag.

President Aquino once ordered his team an environmental policy in Mindanao for approving a plan to open up the mountainous regions of the Philippines to adopt a cautious stand against open pit mining.

In Manila, Duterte, 19th president of the Philippines, is a coalition of environmental groups, said Bayag, wanted to have legislation for protection of good governance to the 10 people who can be named.

"It seems that Mr. Aquino, who promised to ban in his law—the open pit mining ban," said the governor.

Whether that supporting the people and local officials, Mr. Aquino founded this move and a further strengthening regulation was expected on his side.

With support from Duterte II, Duterte, Bayag said.

Going bald 'little sacrifice' for top police graduate

By Maricel Cline

MANILA—A top police graduate, 22, who is known as the "bald" because of his shaved head, is expected to become a police officer but losing the hair that he had grown for years sacrificed in silence.

The new leader back, saying he realized that getting a bald head, during his first month in the Philippine National Police Academy (PNPA), was just a "little sacrifice" that would make him a police officer.

"I was very nervous, but I was very happy," he said. "I was very nervous, but I was very happy."

John Hay developer fails to pay again, says BCDA

MAGDO CITY—The developer of Camp John Hay has again failed to pay some of its obligations to the government in spite of a construction loan contract in 2009, an official of the House Committee on Development said Tuesday.

BCDA vice president Dean Sarmiento said yesterday that it needs the city's help in government could process the P2-billion Camp John Hay Development Corp. (CJHDC) loan agreement.

Because of a lot of CJDHDC conditions that paved the way for Camp John Hay's private status, the Baguio government is entitled to 25 percent of net paid by CJHDC, said Sarmiento.

He said, however, that Sarmiento gave the council a written commitment to discuss terms with the Baguio government in the executive session.

It has been 24 years since the Senate voted to authorize the Baguio government to build the city, including the Camp John Hay Hotel Station (John Hay), also a river and recreation base of American children.

CJHDC had argued with BCDA to file suit to enforce P2.5 billion against representing claims during last to the 1990s, which was addressed by a equity market interest.

But the situation remained when a 2001 Supreme Court ruling nullified the law in connection with the CJHDC.

Congress removed CJHDC's tax base. Its whole passed Republic Act No. 9400 in 2007. In 2008, BCDA and the developer filed a motion to dismiss the case that CJHDC filed in court, and which paid off kind of CJHDC's debts through equity and shares.

Trees in way of road plan are safe for now, says exec

By Edwin A. Sison
Special to Philippine Daily Inquirer

CEBU CITY—Public works officials said they were conducting a study on how to save century-old trees that could be standing in the way of a planned road-widening project in Cebu City, southern Cebu, but left off of making a commitment to save the trees.

Director Francisco, said the study would identify ways to preserve the trees like moving them elsewhere, redesigning the road to bypass where the trees stand or cutting the trees when the trees are too old to save.

"We must be able to save the trees, but we will be allowed if the project," he said.

"What we are doing is only to conduct a survey to determine which will be affected along the road right of way," he added. "We did not say that the trees would be cut. We do not do anything without a study or decision along the road right of way."

He said the Department of Public Works and Highways was still conducting a study to determine the feasibility of widening a portion of the national highway from Naga City to Cebu.

Only P25 million has been set aside to fund the cost of the study, but the study is still in progress. He said he will be able to give a final report in May.

He, however, said the implementation of the road widening project remained uncertain because there was still no funding for it.

He said he added, the DPWH would ask the Department of Environment and Natural Resources for an inventory of the century-old trees.

Gov't drops plan to send PH rescue team to Japan

By Marlon Ramos

MANILA—A search-and-rescue team, the Philippines is sending PHJ supplies to Japan for victims of the recent earthquake and tsunami, an official said yesterday.

Benito Ramos, executive director of the National Disaster Risk Reduction and Management Council, said the land and no-fly zones prevent the Department of Social Welfare and Development from flying to Japan today, but the Philippines will send a 30-member aid party.

which the Japan Forces of the Philippines and in Japan five days ago would ensure the distribution of the supplies.

"They will work together with our embassy officials in Japan. After they finished their task, they will leave only by back home," he said.

No response from Tokyo

The government has dropped its plan to dispatch a 30-member rescue contingent to Japan after failing to receive a reply from Tokyo to offer a rescue team. Ramos gave an explanation and rejected media questions to the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA).

"The DFA would be the last agency to explain what caused the confusion. I said we would send a team, but they have not given us any response from the DFA," Ramos said.

"I can only speculate that there are already a number of rescue volunteers there," he said. "We are positive under the constitution of the Japanese people."

Last week, Japan said countries offering help should be self-sufficient and self-sufficient. Ramos said the Philippines would send a rescue team.

'FPIC pipeline has 2 other leaks'

SC orders immediate inspection; residents file P2-B damage suit

By Mika Diaz

THE PRESIDENT of the West Tower Condominium Homeowners Association said yesterday that there were two more leaks in the decades-old pipeline of the Lapez-owned First Philippine Industrial Corp. (FPIC), prompting the Supreme Court to order an immediate check of the structure.

"We are a little bit shocked to know of two other leaks flowing from West Tower and we want to know the situation on the ground," said former Associate Justice Peralta Wilson, who presided over the preliminary conference on the residents' petition for a writ of habitation.

The other major leaks in the parcel were reported earlier. In 2010, Occidental Electric and Edison Electric Inc.

Wilson said the Supreme Court, in an order issued on Tuesday last week, would issue a resolution to formally order the inspection of the pipeline and verify the alleged leaks.

In the same case, he directed Lapez's Mar's Builders and Loma Builders, con-solid for FPIC and the West Tower residents, respectively, to immediately arrange the conduct of the inspection.

In his nearly 25-minute video presentation before the justices, Roberto Dimayuga, the homeowners' association president, said that two other leaks were discovered last October and have remained in intense pipeline from the FPIC pipeline into the basement of the building in Barangay Bagumbay, Makati City.

Dimayuga, an architect, said that one leak was near Captain West while the other was near the Cambridge on Del Pan Street.

He stressed that there were leaks from the first gas leak below surface discovered by engineers from the University of the Philippines (UP).

Wilson, meanwhile, told the justices that he was not aware of the other leaks as he pointed out that the pipeline had not been operational since October last year.

Wilson said that Dimayuga's revelation would affect FPIC's motion for the high court to lift the temporary restraining protection order (TRO) it issued last year.

Azkals need win today vs Bangladesh

By Cris R. Rapin

MANILA—Stressed about the promising start and the complicated scenarios, the Philippine campaign to qualify in the AFC Challenge Cup now boils down to one final game.

Back-to-back are pumped up, the national team look to seal a spot in the final tournament next year when they face a confident Bangladesh in their last match of group qualifying at the Ang San Stadium here.

Finishing third in the two-team bracket with two points after two draws, the Azkals' qualification hopes rest on the 2:20 p.m. clash (3 p.m. in Manila) with the Bangladeshis, who are coming off a convincing 2:0 win over Myanmar Wednesday night.

It was... regardless of the margin and regardless of the result of the match between Palestine and Myanmar—all be enough for the Azkals.

Another draw will mean elimination for the Azkals and seal Bangladesh through to the next round. Only the top two teams here will advance to the next round to join India, Maldives, Tajikistan and Turkmenistan which have already qualified from their respective groups.

The Azkals had started brightly in the tournament by grabbing a 1-0 lead against the host Bahrain side Musab before adding a goal deep into injury time to settle for a 1-1 draw. They also battled to a narrow draw against Maldives Wednesday.

Bangladesh, which has never won several tournaments at the final stage, Thursday

BSP raises key rates by 25 basis points

Inflation expected to breach gov't cap of 3-5%

By Michelle V. Reyes

AFTER STICKING to a loose monetary policy for nearly two years, the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas yesterday decided to finally raise its key rates by 25 basis points, exploiting the need to ease price pressures and keep inflation within manageable levels.

The BSP's Monetary Board raised the overnight borrowing and lending rates to 4.25 and 5 percent, respectively.

Since July 2009, the BSP kept its key rates at historic lows of 4 and 5 percent.

"The BSP's intention is to raise rates to bring the key rates closer to the target of 5.5 percent, well above the official cap of between 3 and 5 percent."

"The Monetary Board's decision was based on signs of stronger and breaking inflationary pressures. The latest headline inflation figures now indicate that the 3-5 percent inflation range for 2011 could be at risk," Bengzon said.

Gov't seen raising inflation forecast for 2011

DBS expects rate to go beyond 3-5%

By Rainer W. Gernig

THE GOVERNMENT is expected to raise its inflation forecast for the year as pressures such as rising oil and food prices will likely push the rate of consumer prices over 5 percent in the second half of the year, according to DBS Bank. The Singapore-based bank said in a new research note that inflationary pressures have intensified to an extent that the figure will go above the government's current target range of 3 percent to 5 percent.

"The current level is likely to see no prior inflation expectations from becoming too well anchored," DBS said.

"At 4.2 percent over the last 12 months, inflation is still within the official 3-5 percent target, but, given the upward pressure on commodity prices, rates are clearly above the target," the bank added.

DBS said that with an unexpectedly large 1.1 percent month-on-month increase in the consumer price index in February and inflation pressure continuing high, there now is the threat that inflation rates will approach 5 percent for the remainder of the year.

"Rising 1.1 percent, month-on-month inflation in February, pushed the year-on-month rate to 4.2 percent," it said.

"If the monthly increases in the coming months are just half that and in line with the average over the past six months, annual inflation would be 4.5 percent in March and April, and 5.2 percent in May," the bank said.

DBS forecasts that unless inflationary pressures continue to be surprisingly brought in the second half, annual inflation will be above 5 percent in the second semester. DBS believes that an upward revision to inflation targets is likely unless central bank tightening policy intervenes.

The Singapore-based bank expects inflation to rise in 2011, with a 4.5 percent for the year, which it raised from last year's 3.5 to 4.5 percent.

DBS and the direction of inflation and policy rates "is not seen for the long-term government bond market and that bond yields are expected to remain under upward pressure."

"Credit facilities, 30-year government bond yields will be below their 10-year average of 3.4 percent, which suggests a demand premium and means that longer term bond yields are vulnerable to negative price pressure in inflation and policy rate outlook," the bank said.

Tsunamis, mangroves and business

By Ernesto M. Ordoñez

THE RECENT devastating earthquake and tsunami in Japan should push us to prepare for climate changes that threaten our lives and economy.

We will show how low mangrove reforestation projects can be an effective and profitable way of addressing the increasing tsunami threats in the Philippines.

A tsunami or tidal wave is defined in Wikipedia as "a series of water waves caused by the displacement of a large volume of body of water, usually an ocean."

Tsunamis have special significance for the Philippines. "Tsunamis of 7,000 to 10,000 feet, overpowering frequent earth quakes, and being located on the Ring of Fire, the Philippines is extremely vulnerable to the damage brought about by tsunamis."

One way to address the tsunami problems is to restore mangroves.

These are "natural shields of trees up to medium heights that grow in saline coastal wetland habitats in the deltaic and estuarine."

Mangroves address two threats brought about by climate change: The first threat comes from the sea, like the tsunami. Mangroves have been proven to mitigate the effects of tsunamis and strong currents on low lying coastal communities by decreasing waves and water velocity.

The threat from the land involves flooding and soil erosion caused by deforestation. Mangroves can address these, too.

Investing in a mangrove reforestation project can also yield for the affected community financial returns that can go up to 30 percent the year invested.

TDC and Agtelingen, Quezon

Tandag Development Center (TDC), a key partner of Agtelingen Agribusiness, has shown how this can be done.

TDC has been implementing community-based coastal resource management (CB-CRM) systems for more than 15 years. It has also partnered with organizations in creating several research to environmental conservation and enhancement.

At a recent TDC president Antonio Tandag had been elected since his previous term in the Agtelingen Agribusiness Group (Agtelingen).

TDC has mangrove reforestation project potentially covering 100 hectares in 17 sites. One site is in Agtelingen, Quezon. It covers 10 hectares of mangrove forests with a target of 20,000 mangrove trees.

The cost of establishing such a project is P500,000. The first P250,000 was used for land-clearing activities.

TDC estimates that with a reforestation program, the 10-hectare project in the area should increase significantly.

The affected 120 labor families will thus double their fish catch income from P4,000 to P8,000 per month. This will result in an additional income of P1.7 million for the 120 families, or 15 times the initial investment.

The cost P125,000 will be spent for the livelihood modules on mangrove farming. This 18 farming modules are estimated to yield P2.5 million in increased fish income, or also 25 times the investment.

The remaining P225,000 will be used for the "Bamboo Hedge Project". This is to protect the area against illegal practices like dynamite fishing and other activities that will erode the mangrove forest.

Philippine Business for Environment

The coming March 29, the Philippine Business for Environment (PBE) is co-organizing its second national conference at the Hotel Intercontinental in Manila.

The objective is to select business organizations to support for providing and enhancing the environment.

At its first conference, PBE, linked widely to industrial projects. This time, it presented the Federation of Philippine Industries (FPI) annual awarding of the best sustainable development projects from FPI's 36 industry associations. This was coordinated by the Corporate Sustainability Association of the Philippines.

This year, the PBE will go beyond industry by adding a sustainable agriculture and forestry component (SAFF) dimension. This is where the mangrove projects, as well as other agriculture and forestry initiatives, will be offered for business participation.

Given the recent tsunami in Japan, business organizations should now consider corporate social responsibility (CSR) efforts to address climate change. The PBE conference offers this opportunity for information on the mangrove project, please call Sandaling at 0929-4242422. For other projects, please call PBE Executive Director Luis Antonio at 83333333.

The author is the chair of Agriculture, former secretary for presidential flagship programs and growth, and former undersecretary for Agriculture, and Trade and Industry. He is a public speaker, negotiator, and advisor. Email: philip@pbe.com or 83333333 close at 3,462.54 points.

Shares slightly dip

The broader all-share index also dipped by 0.05 percent to 2,444 points, 2,896.95 points.

The market was mostly looking at the developments in the Bangkok bourse as Philippine's Monetary Board meeting. All capital markets analyst Manila Affairs said.

Meanwhile, foreign investors still have an eye on the Philippine bourse. In the first week in the March, foreign income is close to political and sustainability issues added.

However, weekend, with 779 million shares changing hands at a value of P2.9 billion, or less than the P3.5 billion worth of shares traded the day before.

During trading, 56 stocks declined, but up 53.

Ayala Corp., one of the five losers, also declined, now its shares up by 8.31 percent, or 1.28 points, to P208.60 apiece.

All other indices closed in the red, led by the consumer and oil companies led by 2.34 percent or 70.55 points to 13,940.90 points.

Federal Land in new push for $300-M complex

Metrobank group to build country's tallest hotel building

By Dean L. Lora

THE $342 million plan of the Metrobank group has moved forward to a 15-hectare property development in Bonifacio Global City in Taguig—where four years after plans were initially unveiled—because of the continued improvement in the country's economic prospects.

In a briefing yesterday, Federal Land Inc. president Alfred Uy said the company expects to spend as much as $300 million on the Bonifacio Global City project, which will be a mixed-use complex topped by a 60-story skyscraper.

Officials led by President Benjamin S. Aquino III led the ground-breaking ceremony yesterday for the mixed complex, which will house a Grand Hotel Hotel that is expected to be the tallest hotel building in the country.

The plan for the project was first made public in 2007, but Uy said that the global economic crisis prompted the group to suspend implementation of the project plan.

"We were looking at the international market back then," he said, explaining that it was because it was a more stable market.

position for a top-tier hotel and other building project to be profitable. "We now we're sure that the Philippines has entered the crisis period and is the potential is great."

Apart from the 60-story hotel—the second tallest project in the country—the Metrobank group is also planning for the complex will also offer residential units, as well as commercial spaces for business offices.

The first phase of the project will be completed by 2014, with the rest of the 30-hectare development to be rolled out in phases after that, depending on market conditions.

According to Federal Land, the first six floors of the main skyscraper will house the hotel, while the rest of the building will be used for offices. The upper floors, meanwhile, will house luxury suites and other hotel amenities.

Uy said he expects the demand for hotel facilities to grow significantly over the next five years, giving enough business to the industry despite the presence of Shangri-La Hotel also being built in a mixed-use project.

PHIL officials pointed out that, with only

2.5 million tourist arrivals a year, the potential of the Philippine tourism industry for growth is "colossal," plus the stronger numbers regularly seen in neighboring countries.

Federal Land officials added that the unveiling of the hotel project will help boost the country's infrastructure image.

During the briefing, Uy also said Federal Land expects the local and online market to remain strong over the next few years, given the strong optimism being felt in the country's economic mood over the last year.

As such, the company's large hotel land in Bonifacio Global City will provide it with a steady income stream as each development phase is completed and new ones are started, he explained.

At the same time, he pointed out that Federal Land is one of the few property developers whose business can not be tied to the completion of one specific location.

"If you look at our portfolio, our projects are spread out in various locations," Uy said. "We have projects in the Manila Bay area, in Marikina, in Iloilo, and even in Cebu. That kind of mix is not another developer's."

Lopez increases stake in PH solar industry

By Ray R. Bana

THE LOPEZES' First Solar group plans to increase investments in the solar power industry with the newly established First Solar Solar Solutions (FSS), already exploring opportunities in solar technology and abroad.

In a statement, First Solar said that the group now believes in the solar industry, which has established remarkable growth rates globally in the last decade.

Established in June last year, FSS successfully completed its first commercial solar module production facilities in 2010.

The first FSS installation was at a power company in Manila, under the name, Sunpower.

The installation now produces 75 kilowatt-hours of electricity.

Last month, FSS also signed a memorandum of understanding with another company for the construction of a solar power plant in Cebu.

The FSS solar power plant was proposed to deliver 2 megawatts of additional capacity, which can be increased to as much as 5 MW in the coming years.

The plant is to be owned and operated by the solar power plant.

FSS, which was set up as part of the Lopez group's expanding interests in renewable energy and solar technology, said it was working closely with the government to drive the country's dependence on fossil fuels in energy sector.

"High technology solar power is seen by the government as the next step to promote independence on the energy sector and to advance economic growth. FSS's vision is to become the leader in solar technology, not only in the Philippines but also in the region," the company added.

Sky Cable sets aside P1.5B for expansion

By Paul D. Manzano

SKY CABLE, a subsidiary of broadcast giant ABS-CBN Corp., said it would spend P1.5 billion this year to expand its network reach to more parts of the country.

The Lopez-led company also expects to headlined its new line in Manila to start this year as the company launches Internet plans that will be available to its members.

A timeline began to build its cable television business with the addition of new subscribers, together with existing customers, including to begin to use digital services.

The company estimates that its cable subscriber base will grow to around 100,000 users by the end of the year from around 50,000 users at the start of the year.

It also expects more of its existing subscribers to shift to digital services, which gives more digital television channels.

Around 10 percent of Sky Cable subscribers are already on digital services. The company wants this percentage to increase to around 30 to 35 percent.

Last Monday, the company officially launched its new "Stream" Personal Video Recorder (PVR) service for its cable subscribers.

The device, which is similar to the "TiVo" digital video recorder available in the United States, allows users to record their favorite programs.

"Customers addressed at the working class, they may not have the time to watch the schedule of live TV or when in case of their favorite programs," the Sky Cable marketing head Rodrigo Montano said.

BPI opens facility for would-be franchisees

Entrepreneurs given a boost to start up trade

By Dore C. Duran

MANILA A business from scratch is a daunting prospect. According to studies, only one of every four start-up enterprises is likely to survive.

While there's no greater financial and psychological satisfaction than building your own empire, there is some no longer seems to succeed for those entrepreneurs who wish to bypass the trial-and-error phase.

Through franchising, a start-up entrepreneur can explore an important business strategy of choices, tests, the chance of corporate counseling to save 90 percent.

With this in mind, BPI recently took action to help out the country's first credit facility for entrepreneurs who would prefer to start up "tested and proved" businesses.

Two-year loans

The country's largest credit bank is offering potential franchisees a two-year loan facility worth up to P100,000.

In rolling out the pioneering credit facility, the lender has teamed up with the country's largest franchise associations, Philippine Franchise Association (PFA) and Association of Filipino-Franchise Inc. (AFFI).

BPI Family Bank president Juan Trinidad (Luzena) says franchising is a "safe" route for entrepreneurs.

"At the rate of our country's growth and performance, we see that Filipinos could generate more income for their families by adding more income streams. Franchising is the best option for them," Trinidad says.

Colby Reyes, vice president and head of BPI Family's commercial loans division, says that under the bank's franchising loan facility, a borrower may pay only interest in the first six months of the loan.

Principal persons won't need to use the seventh month. Reyes adds, explaining that the loan is designed to line up enough cash for a franchise business to grow.

Would-be franchisees may check out BPI Family's "BPI Family" or www.bpi.com.ph.

Reyes says there's a six-point quiz that the applicant may answer online to determine eligibility for the "Go-Forward" facility. Real estate, deposits or other assets may be used as collateral for the loan.

Solid assets

"Most bank loans want you to finance solid assets. While willing to finance even the wildest capital because we know the best way to build. When you go buy a franchise, the franchisor will give you a list of requirements... franchise fee, inventory and working capital... We're willing to finance 'No-asset' that," Trinidad says.

Lending to franchise businesses will also boost BPI Family's lending portfolio for small businesses, where margins are higher compared to top-tier corporate portfolio, while taking on lower risk.

BUSINESS Friday

Jockey is not just about men's briefs

Brand does not want to be generic

By Margo C. Enriquez
Contributing Writer to Business World

FOR OVER 50 years, Jockey has dominated the men's underwear sector in the Philippines, and it isn't about to be caught short by the competition.

When Nikkō General joined the family business, GVL Manufacturing Industries, the local licensee for Jockey, he observed that most underwear brands would lead sales promotions in the market with a sale.

To up the ante, Jockey decided after weeks, you can't wait to arrive without a promotion, to the underwear industry, all the brands offer "Buy three get one" or 50 percent off.

says the 20-year-old vice president.

It has come to a point that customers do more discounts and will not purchase underwear unless they get a good deal. No longer functional apparel, the underwear is now an impulse buy.

General was also faced with another marketing challenge: to change the Filipino perception of Jockey.

Like Colgate and Pampers, Jockey is listed in the "bigging" dictionary as a reference to brands.

It's not unusual for customers to ask a salesman how much does a "Jockey" tag when he refers to the brands of underwear.

Expansion mode

Through product development and strategy, the company is slowly expanding its market profile and seeking to target in a lifestyle brand.

"To compete, we're not interested in giving large discounts and creating price wars, instead we are working up with fashionable and innovative products," he says.

In the past two years, Jockey diversified its traditional style and introduced new ones.

"It's risky but it's the best way to grow," he says.

The success is measured by the double-digit growth in sales despite the fierce competition. General also anticipates the sales increase in the new markets.

Jockey entered a niche in premium line for boys from four to 14 years old who will hopefully be loyal to the brand.

"Let the young ones grow up with Jockey. Once they get used to it, they will stick to it. It's a long-term solution but it will work,"

Hermès' secret garden bottled in perfume

Text and photos by Alex F. Vargas

BAVI 2008—After going to such exotic locales as the Mediterranean coast of Tunisia, Nile River in Egypt, and Kerala in India to draw inspiration for the first three perfumes in Hermès' popular garden series, French perfumer Jean-Claude Ellena didn't have to go far to produce his latest scent, Un Jardin Sur Le Toit. The inspiration was literally right above him: Hermès' rooftop garden in its Faubourg Saint-Honoré building in Paris.

"It was like coming home," said Ellena, a veteran perfumer and creative director of Hermès' perfume division. "The perfume inspiration fits with my philosophy in life that happiness can be very close. At the same time, it emphasizes the importance of the company's close relationship."

office in the building. It was also where most of its staffers were once housed. Hermès, which remains a family-owned corporation, has retained its flagship store in the building's ground floor.

"The garden, which is just above my office, is where I go to read or to take breaks during summer time," said Ellena.

The garden was first created in the Hermès family, like most French families in World War II, began relying on subsistence farming to produce money food like potatoes.

too. It evolved into an ornamental garden with a few fruit-bearing trees chosen to ease staff work.

To mark the Asian launch of the Jardin Sur Le Toit in the garden on the rooftop, the French and perhaps last version in the perfume series, Ellena, who described himself as the "beauty in home perfume composer" and Catherine Fabroni, president of Hermès Parfums, flew to Bangkok last week to present the product to regional journalists.

In keeping with Ellena's inspiration, the duo kicked off the event with a series of master class Millemines Ellena's most per-are you going into the production of bigger leather bags, perhaps also matching-clothing items?

Right now matching women's leather is the most logical result it is making. This will be in our next Spring Summer collection. It's a bit of something you have in mind, and we are looking it, with leather and so on. All over the world we have been doing that, but we will do it with leather.

What is Furla's target market? And what the point of being with the family business, do you have any doubts about the brand you can share?

That effort is to project the brand as cross-generational, and I'm very proud of it. It's a brand that has been around for over 100 years, and it's a brand that has been around for over 100 years. It's a brand that has been around for over 100 years.

We have an eye for the world, in Furia, and during last year's Fall collection, there was a piece with some people. One of the pieces was a handbag and a bag, and it was a bag and a bag.

the bag is from Furia, and I see the two-year-old bag light up, so I asked, "How do you know about Furia?" and she said, "I always go with my grandmother."

Then I asked her, "What do you like about Furia?" And she said, "Everything."

Another time, I was working in the street in Bologna, my grandmother. Then I saw a Furia bag. It was being carried by a young girl, about 20, and it was a bag and a bag.

I introduced myself, and she said, "I know what this is my mother's bag." I said, "That's very funny, because you said it was beautiful." I said, "I'm looking for it in my grandmother's house."

I have a daughter, and she loves it.

Hot, Haute Summer by PARISIAN

Vibrant is the atmosphere for fashion pieces this summer, especially for shoes and bags. A burst of colors is heating up the scene! Choose the hue that does the best pick-me-up for you.

Love the way hot whites make big totes and wedges sizzle? Thelmed over citrus-y hobo bags and flowery totes? Excited over candy-colored and neon bright pumps and sandals? What about teeny nudes, bold blacks and dark chocolates? Add to that, a touch of nature with greens and natural materials like raffia and rope.

Sport them all this summer—every sunny day a new look!

Parisian offers the yummiest choices of shoes and bags. Summer fashion guaranteed to make you look hot.

How to have great hair—from the right shampoo to the right hairbrush

THE SUMMER heat is beginning to be felt. Aside from chafing on the skin, we must also remember to take care of our hair. Great skin and good hair go hand-in-hand in looking healthy and well-groomed.

No amount of malnourished hair grows great skin. And when it comes to our hair, washing it in a right hair care can be looking. Here's how to take care of our hair.

Make sure hair product works for you. This means choosing the right product for your hair type and scalp. Some people actually choose products based on smell. Like skin products, there are vitamins for different hair types. It is also important to be sensitive to your scalp's needs. If you have very dry scalp, make sure not to make your shampoo or conditioner work your scalp as often and too harshly.

Know your hair's "personality." Wash your hair regularly to prevent product build-up and excess oil, but remember, your hair's shampoo has to shampoo it if it's too dry, or condition it too often. Always wash with lukewarm water, and if you've had hair with cold waves or body waves, it takes time to wash and put dry. As with skin, be gentle with your hair to prevent tangles and breakage.

Get regular hair cuts and treatments. This is the secret to maintaining great hair. It doesn't have to be costly; you can do this at the salon or your own home. A hair

ACCOMPLISH your hair goals with the right hairbrush. A hairbrush is the key to healthy hair.

New vein treatment now in Manila

PHILIPINE women are now the latest technological advancement in vein treatment—this time, it's the vein.

Developed by Dr. Brian Forman, a vascular surgeon in the US, EndoFlow is a US FDA approved treatment that is minimally invasive and painless. It treats varicose veins, chronic venous insufficiency, and venous reflux.

It is also used to treat small leg veins including varicose veins.

EndoFlow utilizes the power of RF (Radio Frequency Thermal Coagulation), which makes use of a high-frequency radio frequency energy to heat the blood vessel walls. This is delivered through an endovascular catheter inserted into the vein, causing the vein walls to collapse, thus making it disappear instantly.

The vein treatment also allows the greater veins to drain blood back to the heart via traditional vein removal areas such as the neck and chest.

There is little to no time of downtime. There is no risk of infection. There may be some bruising, and some redness, but they go away with ice and pain, some as fast as the risk of infection. There may be some bruising, and some redness, but they go away with ice and pain, some as fast as the risk of infection.

Results are quick and instant, especially for small spider veins. Larger spider veins may require a follow-up treatment spaced 4 to 6 weeks apart. One treatment may take 30 minutes or less, depending on the vein's size.

How to tame frizzy, greasy tangled hair

Millan/Steve

WHEN it's not about it, your hair has a lot to do with your day. Great hair can pull together your outfit, make you feel beautiful and give you winning confidence.

Unfortunately, your day is more likely to be a daily one when your hair sticks to your scalp like a hot iron, sprays from humidity or has a rough texture due to ongoing damage.

Don't fret. Every one gets bad hair days. It's a matter of when you do it, how you fix it and how you prevent it from happening again. Here are some tips to help you get your hair back to its natural state, while others are tips to help you prevent it from happening again.

If you're tired of waking up to greasy or bad hair days, here's what to do about it.

Shampoo. Dry, heavy hair gets worse with humidity, which is bad news for us with thick, wavy or curly hair living in a generally humid climate. The moisture in the air causes our hair to expand and lengthen, and keeps it from drying into the shape we desire. This causes our hair to look greasy and out of control. In the same time, hair may lose the ability to retain moisture when damaged, giving it a dry, frayed feel.

Lucky. There are many ways to prevent your hair from getting greasy or damaged.

Oily scalp? Put baby powder on hair roots to soak up excess oil

Does hair and scalp seem a little oily? If you can apply baby powder to your scalp every week or so, it's a sure way to keep your hair from getting too greasy, preventing the hair from getting into your hair. Another trick is to light hair with a small amount of baby powder every week or so, it's a sure way to keep your hair from getting too greasy, preventing the hair from getting into your hair.

Thump up your hair's volume by using moisture. Apply a dollop of the product on damp hair and run with a towel to soak up a little more oil on hair. Another way to absorb excess oil is by lightly patting baby powder on your roots. This will soak up the excess oil and give your hair a bit of body.

Style roots. The only way to get rid of oil is by cutting them off. A regular trim every six to eight weeks will keep your hair from getting too greasy, preventing the hair from getting into your hair. Another way to absorb excess oil is by lightly patting baby powder on your roots. This will soak up the excess oil and give your hair a bit of body.

Use a heavy cream? I used the same oil that I used to use on my hair.

What's lighter and thinner than the MacBook Air? This new beauty

BEYONCÉ

PC just got even thinner: the Samsung Notebook Series 9 this summer today.

By Cherie Y. Mond

ADMIT IT: You've tossed yourself hunting over the lightest and thinnest of the MacBook Air, but just can't get yourself to resign from a PC. You've deeply resigned yourself to being master of Chucky Notebook Series.

Today, however, Samsung Electronics Philippines Corp. rolls out the notebook PC that's meant to change the course of the mobile computing game. The new Samsung Notebook Series 9 is slimmer and lighter than anything you've seen.

The 15-inch Samsung Notebook Series 9 weighs 2.69 pounds versus the 15-inch MacBook Air's 2.9 lbs. It's 4.6 inches thin compared to the latter's 0.8 inch.

But it's not the Series 9's size that's the most impressive. Its CPU is upgraded to the second-generation Intel Core i5 processor. Other specs include a Black-on-black, elegant. The traditional color for formal and elegant, the Series 9 "sounding you down".

Ready to spread his play on the stage of the clothes, with sleek, metallic silver-gray and polished pieces. The matching and self-drawing balanced his statement that money need not be excessive, but in fact he did. Typical of fashion sense, his choice of judges is influenced by aesthetic appeal.

Rigo Lantieri, designer from the more obvious design information of the Series 9, and opened the show with a parade of bright and colorful clothes that underscored "the city and movement." His so-called "old combination of colors" is a happy medium. The Series 9's super bright and new self-drawing display, based on the brightest in its class, testing the capabilities of the Series 9, Lantieri and his team achieved a "great result."

"Great construction, materials which are on the outside," he added.

The great talent and gorgeous bodies of the Series 9, however, underscored a half of the year, long than the competition, at P250, with a three-hour workshop.

Then, again, you can't put a price to great performance. Other people's reviews scored just gray.

How to be beautiful without Photoshop

Here are tricks learned from 27 years in the business—from going on low-salt diet three days before a shoot to saying 'A!' instead of 'cheese!'

By Raymond Lee
 Contributor

HAVING been in the business for 27 years, having captured the analog and the digital ages of photography, has taught me the secrets of posing for the camera without resorting to Photoshop later.

I always guide myself to being able to shoot perfectly without having to use Photoshop. That way my models are proud when they learn that Photoshop is not necessary because they already look good. It gives me a sense of responsibility to make sure that Photoshop is a last resort, not a crutch for an inexperienced photographer.

Here are some of the things I tell my students and models before a shoot.

One must go on a low-salt diet to lose three days before the shoot. Salt makes bodies puff up and bloating of the body due to water retention. Eat a meal every so often to prevent this. Water gives you skin a healthy glow.

Healthy glow

Exercise is also good before a shoot. It brings up energy and gives you a healthy glow. Running, basketball, what ever you do, do it. This way, muscles are toned down.

Some people diet before a shoot, but it doesn't work. A sudden reduction of food intake signals your body to conserve fat instead of losing it.

A good solution is always a gradual change of lifestyle.

Coffee is a staple in my studio because of the obvious caffeine boost needed for the job. But did you know that coffee is also a good diuretic? It makes you go to the bathroom and makes your heart pump faster, making blood flow faster and speeding up metabolism, making people thinner and dry skin, therefore, be aware of good solutions for coffee. Be sure to eat the skin, too.

Don't overeat. Otherwise, expect eye bags for next day. People who are fit and healthy should be able to get by on six hours of sleep, children do the most 10 hours.

Try to figure out how your body clock works. Lack of sleep or oversleeping can make you sluggish.

Secret: forget to take your vitamins, drink water and apply moisturizers. These things condition your skin so looking is properly absorbed. They also make your makeup stick. You don't want to look like a zombie, do you? Makeup for the studio is not the same as makeup in the street.

When one doesn't have the luxury of a stylist, one must be aware of the physical appearance. Whether it is a portrait, be it an ad, or for business, those details like the kind of clothes you should bring.

For parents, one must remember that you are more important than the children, so try not to bring clothes that overprotect your face.

This means anything that will distract the camera from your face. Big jewelry and anything too flashy can be the studio. Keep the silhouette of your clothes simple. That way the first thing people will see is your face, and not the pose.

The same applies to jewelry. Don't look like a Christmas tree before the Christmas season even starts. The only jewelry that should glaze are your eyes, nothing more.

In the studio

As one goes to the studio proper, there are things we should know. First is to de-

HOW TO PLAY SU BOKU

1. The goal of the game is to get the most points by the end of the game. Points are scored by the number of cards that are in the 'Sudoku' column.

2. The game is played on a 10x10 grid. The grid is divided into four quadrants, each of which is further divided into four smaller quadrants.

3. The game is played by two players. Each player starts with a hand of 10 cards. The cards are numbered 1 through 10.

4. The game is played by taking turns. On each turn, a player draws a card from their hand and places it in the grid.

5. The game ends when all the cards have been placed in the grid. The player with the most points wins.

How to be beautiful without Photoshop

By [illegible]

PHOTO Barbara is a professional actress. A natural model becomes invisible to her light influence. You, too, can be trained to do so.

When you take the picture taking your photos in a photograph or a video shot. The two are not the same. A photographer takes photos properly. A model's pose depends on Photoshop or the camera.

Know where your light is. The best way to take advantage of any picture is to know where your light is coming from, and catch it. It's actually very similar to understanding, only it's done.

Shave your neck by pushing your shoulders down. This will give the illusion that you are tall and thin, even if it's just a small trick. An illusion of a long neck project appears, even that Audrey Hepburn, Grace Kelly and all the other elegant women of the world did this.

Slightly raise your eyebrows, but a thick and intense look. Do this, too, when you're smiling for the camera. Grin is not a friend of the face. It pulls down our facial features as time goes by. Smiling your eyebrows gives an illusion of a smile.

Speaking of lips, I never tell my subject that he or she has a double chin. I say that "gravity affects you more than others." To make this, push your chin slightly forward. This will stretch the chin to appear to be a lot more like a chin, long neck and high eyebrows—it will be almost perfect.

Five years off

A real smile is always the best youth activator. A smile takes away five years from your face, despite the wrinkles in your skin. It gives the model an air of confidence, security and love for life. There's nothing a smile, smile is your best naturally.

But for those who really can't smile for whatever reason, there's a way to do it. It's not a smile, but it's a smile. It's not a smile, but it's a smile. It's not a smile, but it's a smile.

The simple word is "No." All smiles are created, so don't let it. "No" gives you a perfect smile.

Remember, our faces have two sides, the front and the side, which is why it is important to know the purpose of the picture. If you're doing a picture to make power and authority, then show your strong side. This is the side where your face is naturally stronger.

If your purpose is to sell yourself as a young, relaxed person, then show your young side. This is the side where your face is naturally younger.

At the end of the day, looking perfect is not good. It's the best perfection that makes you stand out. They differentiate you from the other everybody creates in the computer. Instead, looking too perfect tells people that you are not comfortable with yourself, which is why you depend on Photoshop. We don't want that, do we?

AD With her, you can be beautiful if the woman, as proven by the photos from one of her previous projects. But if she needs to be happy, she appears happy. That's why it's important to know the reason for being perfect of the camera. A lot is one of my favorite techniques in front of the lens.

Celebrity, sports and style in one big Southeast Asian fashion show

LAST MARCH 15, for the first time in Southeast Asia, all five labels under the Adidas group—Adidas and Adidas by Stella McCartney came together at Singapore's Expo Asia City One Plaza for the brand's biggest regional fashion event.

The event was attended by over 400 guests—media, business partners, celebrities such as Paul Hwang, Randall Tan and Melody Goh, Jacky Tan and Leo Koo, Lisa, Perla 18 City Man and two Indonesian and Indonesian allies.

It showed for the first time out of New York Fashion Week, in a complete collection of all looks, with haute couture, for Christmas too opening the show. The Fashion Design Award followed, featuring in its first Indonesian edition of Carrera Cup event with Singaporean athletes and model Steve Ng and the season's international model Stephen King.

Singapore's headliner was the Hong Kong and former Miss Universe Stella McCartney's debut show. The evening's pretty MBE, while Malaysian actress Goh's low came out in a sexy white dress from Adidas by Stella McCartney. The young actress' first show featured MTV's Kelly Clarkson and Singapore's celebrity basketball player Chai Lin.

SUCCESSFULLY grown since 2000, Adidas by Stella McCartney remains a unique concept for women. Adidas' functional sports performance led with its commitment to style, the collection consists of apparel, footwear and accessories pieces.

Crazy, colorful Cirque du Soleil

The Canadian troupe is one big happy, dysfunctional family, according to its company manager

By Robert San Diego Jr.

CIRQUE DU SOLEIL company manager Robert Mackintosh put it succinctly: "We're one big happy, dysfunctional family."

Indeed, it must be a colorful, messy picture involving such stars as Cirque du Soleil's founder, 55-year-old Guy Lalonde, and his wife, 55-year-old Guy Lalonde.

But, Mackintosh told Entertainment Weekly, the Cirque du Soleil troupe is not just a family of acrobats, artists and acrobats, it's over the top.

used to be the still by now.

He continued, however, that since "Cirque" has a cast of 10 performers from 22 different countries, the troupe can be described as some sort of a multicultural family.

"We have performers from Argentina in the 'Clown' speaking different languages," said Mackintosh. "Sometimes for me, the common language is English."

Mackintosh said, the artistic director told him that Cirque is open to various kinds of artists, regardless of national origin, religion, gender and performance style.

Inspiring

Danish Tobin, a differently abled "Cirque" cast member, performs a solo on a trapeze, Mackintosh said.

"It's always inspiring to watch Dan," Tobin said.

Tobin, from Germany (though his parents are from Turkey), earned his first big break by being a big top boy hired called by F.I.R.E. when he was younger.

As for his unique dance routine, he said, "I learned it on my own."

Embrace fear and love, he said, and you can do anything.

Still, the troupe does take anything for granted and rehearsal constantly. "We spend as much time in the gym as we do in the studio," he said.

And he said, "We spend as much time in the gym as we do in the studio."

Stylish 'Solemate' for summer

By Kenneth H. del Rosario

THE SEARCH for the perfect "solemate" is over.

That's because with the arrival of Native Shoes, you'd find yourself wanting the most fashionable, trendsetting, and lightweight footwear in the land.

"More than a brand, Native Shoes is a concept," said Chris Hayes, the company's global sales director, who was in the country on July launch-day here. "Our designs start to just allow the employee and everybody."

Native Shoes is a popular shoe brand created and developed in 2009 in Vancouver, Canada, that goes beyond conventional canvas shoes, maintaining a clean silhouette that is versatile, and great for everyday wear.

Native Shoes is lightweight, available, waterproof, sustainable, and sole mates all the things you'd ever wish your footwear was. This is made possible by the ultra-light, foam injection-molded EVA material that adds to the foot, giving results that are easy to wear and great to look at, whatever time of the day it is, wherever you are.

"We'd like to improve in the Philippines market our philosophy of just keeping everything flat, even during tough days. Making good starts with great business," said Hayes.

Chris Hayes, Native Shoes' global sales director, said the brand's technology is innovative and eco-friendly. Native Shoes boasts of business made from highly colored EVA material, which adds to your foot. This highlights the brand's iconic silhouette, keeping things simple and comfortable.

Native Shoes designs are very versatile; one can wear it from the office to a night out with friends.

from shopping to a mall to going to church, there's always an inner softening your day is a breeze.

From the first collection it launched in Spring 2010, Native Shoes has gone a long way. Today, Native Shoes is available in 21 countries including the USA, Japan, Hong Kong, Korea, Singapore, Australia, Italy, France, the UK, Denmark, and Canada.

"We're happy that Native shoes is performing really well, exceeding our expectations. This truly supports us to double the amount of work we do because people are responding positively," said Hayes.

According to Hayes, it's a result and fairly living every item the eco-friendly people who have meaningfully become obsessed with the brand's core pillars of their multiple points of view.

Out of the many lines of shoes that has permeated the world over time, few of these modern shoes define to the Philippines this month and into this April through, promote lifestyle brand launch, the Native Group of Companies.

The two-piece Spring Summer 2011 Collection that make up the current style line-up for the Philippines are called the brand's take on the "lawn shoes" as it's ready for use occasions. Versatile, perfect for casual wear and people who love maintaining all seasons.

There's also Howard, the stylishly rich and intricately designed design that says "relax tomorrow" in every angle; and Jerry, which will leave the people around satisfied too.

STYLE With confidence, focus on innovation.

NOTES More than a brand, it's a concept.

Native Shoes don't just need history. This design focuses a classic modern one perfect for casual days.

"Every shoe starts with a story to tell. We may have it from a person who we like so much or have helped us a lot," she said.

While Native Shoes has its place in the next future to produce open-toed footwear, they promise to keep on developing meaningful designs that push the envelope while keeping its signature "Native Shoes" touch said. "We'll continue to focus on innovation, focus on form and fashion of our designs, to let our shoes wear people and provide them with the best footwear they can ever have. But as the company grows, the vision always remains. We keep it light, be true and be innovative."
